PhD Candidate specialized in planetary wave-plasma instability using a data analysis approach of in situ radio and electron measurements and analytical modelization

Employment History

- 2022– 2025 PhD in Astrophysics Laboratory of Astrophysics of Marseille, Aix-Marseille University (France)
Thesis title: Understanding the microphysics of Jovian radio auroral emissions with Juno space probe
-Theory in plasma-wave instability in a magnetospheric context
-Development of code to analyze in situ measurements
-Comparative planetology between Jupiter, Saturn, and Earth emissions
Teaching 64h/yr: Physics practical courses and Mathematics tutorials
- 2022 Master 2 Internship Laboratory of Astrophysics of Marseille (France)
Subject: Jovian radio auroral emissions: preliminary works to my PhD
- 2021 Master 1 Internship LESIA, Observatory of Paris (France)
Subject: Comparative study of auroral radio sources from Jupiter and Saturn

Education

- 2021 – 2022 Master's Degree Plasma Physics, Paris Saclay University
- 2019–2020 Bachelor's Degree of Fundamental Physics, Paris Saclay University
- 2019 – 2022 Magistère of Fundamental Physics, Paris Saclay University
Supplementary diploma during Master and Bachelor for more class

Skills

- Languages English & French: Strong reading, writing and speaking competences ; Spanish: Basics
- Coding Proficiency in Python, Knowledge in C++ and IDL
- Astronomy Observation nights at Observatory of Haute Provence

Community Activities

- 2022–2025 Laboratory's Sustainable Development Group Member
Laboratory's Seminar Organizing Committee
- 2023–2025 PhD Representative in Laboratory Council
Organizing Committee in Festival d'Astronomie de Provence, Local astronomy outreach event
- 2025 Local Organizing Committee for Planetary, solar and heliospheric Radio Emissions X, Marseille France
